A knowledgeable user, David, reviewed a new feature in Lightroom 5 called "Moderate". He said the feature is only useful if the images that are imported into the catalog are of acceptable quality. He also hates the display of item tags. If more than a couple of tags are assigned with the same value, the tags are displayed as a long line. Even with the moderate display option on, the lengthy list of tags still makes it difficult to quickly see what the tags are. David has different preferences here than I do. I would have no complaint about a long list of tags line, Photoshop CS5 has more than 30 new features and capabilities. It got faster and smarter at the same time.
