What's New in the?

Are you an entrepreneur, film lover, web designer, or just a movie enthusiast? Then this is the right icon pack for you! All the 50 movies icons that are included in this pack are designed to help you bring original and artistic effects to your files and directories. Every image included in this pack comes in both PNG and JPEG format. You can use them with any dock program that is compatible with this kind of format. You can even make your own change to the icons that you like the most. If you're interested in the icons that this pack includes, you can get started in just a few clicks:Q: Conditional value not working using [[-z $X]] I am checking if the value of a variable is a certain string or not. If the value is not a certain string, I want the script to stop, but if the value is a certain string, then continue on. Here is what I am doing: [[-z $X]] && { echo 'Value is not a number' ; exit 0; } [[$X == "28"]] && { echo 'Value is a number' ; exit 0; } If I run this script, it will print: Value is not a number However, if I change the second line to: [[$X == "28"]] && { echo 'Value is a number' ; exit 0; } This will print the correct message: Value is a number I am trying to use conditional operator, but for some reason it is not working. I have also tried using a pipe and a wildcard, but the behavior is the same. A: No need to use [[-z $X]], since [[$X == 28]] will work fine. $X is not a number $X is a number Use the conditional operator: [[$X == 28]] && echo "Value is a number" # if the shell-builtin test -z is true (z is a number), then # return zero status # and the shell-builtin test -n is false (n is not a number), then # return a non-zero status and execute the following in the # # -n status command [[$X == 28]] && echo "Value is a number" || echo "Value is not a number" # if the shell-builtin test -z is false (z is not a number), then # return a non-zero status, and the shell-builtin test -n is true # (n is a number), then echo "Value is a number" and exit 0; # otherwise echo "Value is not a number" and exit 1; [[$X == 28]]
